

MAY DAY

May Day was a hot, dry, windy day this year but that did not stop residents from celebrating the day with flowers. The displays were beautiful and creative. We rode our bikes criss crossing the island to view as many as possible. Thanks to everyone who participated!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE:

June 2014

Vol 6 No.10

During my time as President, I tried hard to thank our officers and board members for all the good work they did for our club. Each one of them made my job much easier. They knew what needed to be done and did it. I never had to worry that something would fall through a crack, because I knew they were on top of everything. Also, things often happened that added to their duties and they always took on the extra burdens graciously. So, thank you again Edie Graber, Lynn Danielson, Margaret Hay, Eileen Ryan, Barbara Jordon and Marilyn Bittle.

Our Chairmen did the same. Anyone watching saw a prime example of this when Diane Bateman and Cathy Black-Smith rode around Naples placing cards on the doors of our May Day participants. Also, Dee Mattern and Linda Schoen deserve similar praise for making travel plans for our members to attend distant events. These ladies took on these jobs and quietly and efficiently did them well. Linda Martinelli will do the same for the Flea Market. So thank you to all of our Chairs and Co-Chairs for stepping up and doing your jobs so well.

Last, congratulations to Sandy Davidson and our new Board. Sandy will be a great president. Please celebrate with us on June 12 at her Installation.

It has been a privilege to serve as your NIGC president. I've had a wonderful experience filled with friendship and a sense of accomplishment. So, thank you.

A Master Gardener's Pruning Philosophy

Abandoning his dream of becoming a physician, Ezio Etow learned all about plants while growing vegetables in an internment camp during WWII. The following is his pruning method and philosophy. All references to 'plant' apply to both trees and shrubs.

"The biggest threat to plants isn't pests, disease or draught. It's the gardener."

Become acquainted with your subject: study its natural form. The back of a plant needs attention, too. Careless cuts can take years to correct, if ever.

Before you start cutting WITH CLEAN SNIPPERS, examine the specimen for dead, broken, malformed, crowded, crossed limbs/branches/twigs, all which should be cut away. To avoid cutting away a good limb, use bright nylon twine to identify those that need pruning.

"Leave your ego outside the garden."

Making that first cut: position clippers 1/4" from the main trunk or main branch and make a traversal cut across area to be cut away (do not cut on an angle, angle cuts are LARGER and expose MORE SURFACE which could increase chance of DISEASE).

First remove obvious suckers and any other branch that can drain the energy out of the plant. Make sure to cut above nodes/buds so they face upward and outward. (Inward growing branches are formed when one willy-nilly cuts below an inward growing node/bud.) Never prune away any more than 15% of any plant. Plants need leaves for photosynthesis (plants process sunlight to synthesize foods from carbon dioxide and water and generates oxygen as a by-product).

After you make the first cut, step back (much like a painter at the easel) and check the 'balance' of plant before moving to the next limb.

Prune after a plant's blooms are spent or after fruits have been harvested. Of course, prune any time there's obvious damage to a limb to eliminate an obvious path of disease from entering the plant.

Wait a couple weeks before fertilizing. Apply a balanced fertilizer around the drip line, not near the trunk. No matter how mild a fertilizer may be, dilute all formulas with a ratio of (1) part fertilizer to (2) parts water. It's better to feed rather than fertilize. Use organics whenever possible but remember that too much of a good thing can also harm instead of help.

Start young plants off on the right 'foot' to ensure both a pleasing and correct form as it matures. A well-pruned young plant will eliminate tangles and mish-mash as it developed and make future pruning a snap.

Put as much thought into pruning as you would in selecting a new hairstyle...we can all relate to that.

Follow Mr. Etow's footsteps and you can prune anything.

Hugs to all. Kathy Kildebeck, Horticulture Chairman

Green Sheets

Kudos to the 57 active members who returned green sheets to Marilyn Bittle in March. This is an all time record and a testimony to the spirit and energy of our members. The 2014-16 Board is almost complete. I may be making one or two more calls and I hope our members will respond with a "yes" to fill the remaining positions. We are a busy club and we need "all hands on deck".

2013-2014 HORTICULTURE SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENTS

It is my pleasure to announce we have awarded a scholarship of $ 800 to Karen Tejada for the Fall Semester of 2014 at LBCC. Karen is 26 years old and presently a Horticulture major carrying 14.5 units and maintaining 3.067 GPA. She is the youngest of eight children and the first in her family to go to college. Her instructors tell us Karen has always been very active in the lab and not afraid to ask questions and search out answers. She intends to take more horticulture classes at LBCC and then transfer to a University and receive a degree in Soil Sciences with an emphasis on organic soils.

Our second recipient, Sean Kite, will receive $800 for the Fall Semester of 2014 at LBCC. This is the second time he has received a scholarship from the garden club. He is 25 and carries 13.5 units and has a GPA of 2.7. This young man has had many roadblocks in his quest for success at LBCC. His attitude is remarkable as he states " I have learned to accommodate myself so I can do just about anything a person without disabilities can do." He, also ,works for the college in their plant sale and volunteers at the Urban Farm community garden pruning, planing and restoring the landscape. He intends to become a landscape architect and says he is progressing closer and closer to his goal.

These are two really deserving students and I'm proud that we can help them realize their goals through our scholarship program.

Laurie Scanlin, Scholarship Chairman

We were thrilled to hear Steve Conti, Appraiser to the Stars say that he loved doing our program because he got to appraise East Coast treasures located here in Naples! Such a delightful speaker! Some of the items included jewelry, an elaborate Chinese incense pot, silver teapot and a Prang bowl.
